A BIRD'S-EYE VIEW OF THE LITERATURE OF ETHICAL SCIENCE SINCE THE TIME OF CHARLES DARWIN. Walter L. Sheldon. In presenting this paper I am assuming that it is being offered to a body of men for the most part absorbed in a study of the physical sciences. Owing to the necessity nowadays for specializing, and to the effort required to keep up even with the literature in your own departments, it may be that some of you are not fully aware of what has been going on along those lines where the work is of a more subjective character. It struck me therefore that I might be doing a real service by giving you a hint as to the trend of the literature in the science of ethics for the last three or four decades, since the time of Darwin. It would be a satisfaction...
